Omaha and George Francis Train.

"A. D. R.," of the Tribune, is on his travels again, and furnishes the following lively sketch of the growth of Omaha and the rise and progress of George Francis Train:

From 1857 to 1864 Omaha had a hard struggle. But the great Pacific Railroad has infused wonderful vigor, and to-day the title capital of Nebraska is the liveliest city in the United States. The railway company has erected an immense brick car house, engine house, and machine shops, and five or six hundred buildings have gone up this season. One brick block has cost $100,000. Streets are being graded, side-walks are thronged with returned gold-seekers, discharged soldiers, farmers selling produce, speculators, Indians, and all the strange phases of border life. The population is 8,000. Single grocery houses are doing a business of half a million dollars per year; and nearly all the pioneer merchants and bankers have made fortunes. The railroad disburses a quarter of a million dollars per month. Times are flush, and property-holders sanguine. Some enthusiastic residents expect very soon to see here another Chicago. Omaha will not be all their fancy paints her, but she has a great future, and will become a metropolitan city.

Two great companies have been organized after the French mode. I. The Credit Mobilier, composed of the capitalists who are building the Pacific Railroad. General Dix is President of the road. T. C. Durant, President of the Credit Mobilier, and Vice President and sole contractor of the road, furnishes the energy and most of the brains for this stupendous National enterprise. II. The Credit Fonchier—George Francis Train, President—organized for dealing in lands and stocks—for building the cities along the line from the Missouri to Salt Lake. This corporation has been clothed by the Nebraska Legislature with nearly every power imaginable, save that of reconstructing the late rebel States. It is erecting neat cottages in Omaha, each costing $1,150, and renting for $25 per month. It has also made heavy purchases of land at Columbus and other points West.

Mr. Train owns personally about 500 acres in Omaha, which cost him only $1.75 an acre—a most promising investment. He is a noticeable, original American, who has compressed wonderful and varied experiences into his short life. An orphan boy employed to sweep the counting-room, he rose to the head of a great Boston shipping house, then established a branch in Liverpool; next organized and conducted a heavy commission business in Australia, and astonished his neighbors in that era of fabulous prices with Brussels carpets and marble counters, and a free champagne luncheon daily in his business office. Afterwards he made a circuit of the world, wrote books of travel, fought British conservatism and prejudices against street railways, occupying his leisure by fiery and audacious American war speeches to our Island cousins, until he spent his fortune and enjoyed the delights of a month in a British prison. Then he returned to America, and lectured everywhere, championing the Fenians, and, indeed, the whole Irish race. It is said the Atlantic and Great Western Railway Company paid him $100,000 for certain financial negotiations abroad. Now he is trying to build a belt of cities across the continent—a magnificent project, whether it succeeds or not. Curiously combining keen sagacity with wild enthusiasm, a man who might have built the pyramids, or been confined in a straight jacket for his eccentricities, according to the age he lived in, he observes drily that since he began to make money people no longer pronounce him crazy. He says Chicago and San Francisco have more men of brains than any other city in the world—"men who know what to do in an earthquake, a fire, or a shipwreck"—a definition of brains worthy of Fosco. He drinks no spirits; uses no tobacco; talks on the stump like an embodied Niagara; composes songs to order by the hour, as fast as he can sing them, like an Italian improvisatore; remembers every droll story, from Joe Miller to Artemus Ward; is a born actor; is intensely in earnest, and has the most absolute and outspoken faith in himself and his future.

THAT MYSTERIOUS BOX.—Some days since, a box was found buried in a mysterious way in the sand, out near the corner of Post and Leavenworth streets, and on its being exposed to the air a very decidedly mysterious odor emanated from it. The finders thought at first they would open it, under the impression that it contained gold-dust or stolen plate, and then, on second thoughts, nitro-glycerine suggested itself, and they concluded they wouldn't. With fingers clasping their olfactory organs, they started for the Police Office and laid the facts before Chief Crowley. A council of war was held, and it was decided not to commence operations for a day or two. The alarm spread; the neighbors were in arms. They were not going to sit there idly until they were blown to atoms by a sudden explosion; not they, indeed! A second deputation was sent down to the City Hall, and, to satisfy them, the Chief dispatched half the regular force and all the detectives to the scene of danger and excitement. A barrier of earth was erected, a purchase rigged, and the operators, screened as much as possible from the effects of the forthcoming shock, proceeded to cautiously burst open the mysterious box. At last the lid showed signs of weakening; expectation was on tip toe. Look out, the crash is coming! It came. The box was open, and inside was seen—not rows of bottles of the terrible "glenoine oil," but the inanimate form of a defunct canine of immature years, which is supposed to have belonged to the hound species, the opinion being based on the strength of its scent. The procession re-formed and returned to the City Hall in solemn silence, and the excitement, like the cholera panic, suddenly subsided.—Alta, 15th January.

Why not Admit Utah?

The Telegraph says that "one reason urged against the admission of Utah is, that the Mormons would rule the State, when State it became." Precisely so, or perhaps it would be stating it a little more exactly by saying that Brigham Young and the High Council would rule the State. This is one of the real and valid objections which are urged against the admission of Utah. As it is, everybody knows that, barring the somewhat wholesome check which Congress now holds over legislation, the whole system of quasi Republican government in Utah is now subservient to a single will. While we have the forms of popular institutions, and annually perpetrate the sublime farce of holding elections, and assembling the Legislature, there is a perfect and complete union of Church and State, and as is always the case, the former rules with despotic, unlimited, unrestricted sway. So far as political, or for that matter any temporal matters are concerned, there is throughout the Territory no independence of thought or action on the part of the people. They march up to the polls and vote for the man or men selected by the head of the Church, and cast their ballots as their Bishops, who draw their inspiration from the same source, may dictate.

It is no answer to this objection, even if it be true, that the people are willing, or even prefer, to submit to this dictation and permit somebody else to do their thinking for them. Just what would happen to the unlucky wight who should dare to oppose it, it is unnecessary now to inquire, or by what means obedience to Church behests is coerced, if coercion be used. It is sufficient to know the fact, that while we, under the Organic Act and the laws, have the mere idle forms of popular institutions, we live under the most complete theocratic Church despotism which the world has ever seen since the days of Mohammed. Therefore, when it is objected that the Mormons would govern the future sovereignty, it is well understood that that means that the head of the Church would rule with imperious sway the State.

It is claimed by the opponents of Mormonism that the whole system, as administered by the present rulers, is antagonistic to the theory of our civil institutions, in conflict with the independent manhood of freemen, and contrary to the spirit of our Constitution. That the Church authority and government are held to be higher than the law, in matters of civil government and beyond the question of mere religious opinion, is well exemplified in the notorious disregard of the law against Polygamy. The law says it is a crime; the Church proclaims it one of the cardinal virtues. The law prohibits it; the Church teaches and enforces it. The law denounces against it the severest penalties; the Church scoffs at them and proclaims immunity. Hence, so long as Mormonism, administered, taught and practiced, as it to-day is, shall be in the ascendancy, the admission of Utah into the Union as a State will be resisted by those who believe the whole system is wrong, politically and civilly considered. In other communities, where the wholesome rule that the majority should govern, prevails, that majority is restricted, restrained, and itself governed by the limitations of Constitutions. But what sort of a Constitution could be devised to restrain, restrict, or limit a theocratic government wielded and controlled by a single man; and that man claiming and believed to rule by divine inspiration and daily revelation from Heaven?

Again, taking the question of Polygamy for example. The doctrine and practice is abhorrent to the nation and in conflict with all its ideas of propriety and right. The Constitution of the "State of Deseret" says nothing on the subject. It neither permits nor prohibits it. Polygamy as well as slavery is left entirely in the discretion of the Legislature, a Mormon Legislature, controlled by the head of the Church. Once admitted into the Union as a State, and Polygamy could not only be practiced and perpetuated, but enforced by legislation, as it now is by "counsel." But suppose that with their acknowledged shrewdness the Church leaders should consent to embody in the Constitution a clause prohibiting Polygamy. The Constitution itself provides that by a very simple and easy process it may be amended, without consulting Congress or any other body. Once admitted, the obnoxious clause against Polygamy would be stricken out and the State irrevocably devoted to the "Divine institution."

On the whole, therefore, we don't think it would be very wise to admit Utah into the Union just yet, and strongly suspect that the petition to Congress for that purpose will not commend itself to the immediate and favorable consideration of that body, at its present session.

It is not expected the Colorado vote will be taken till the arrival of Pomeroy and Ross, of Kansas, when it is hoped the admission bill will pass over the veto.

The Tariff bill came up, and after slight amendment, Davis moved to recommit the bill to the committee, with the Internal Revenue bill, for the purpose of reducing taxes one hundred millions. [The President's Private Secretary here entered with the Nebraska veto message.] Grimes moved to strike out that portion of Davis's motion looking to a decrease of $100,000 taxation. Therefore be it enacted, That no moneys hereby appropriated be paid for the support of the legation at Rome, or future expenses of any such legation.

Hale moved to strike out the preamble, and the motion prevailed—65 to 32.

Pending the question, the Committee rose and reported the Invalid Pension bill to the House, which passed it, and adjourned.

Washington, January 29.

The President, in vetoing the Nebraska bill, further says that, if Congress is satisfied that Nebraska has sufficient population, and that her people desire a State government, good faith would seem to demand that she be admitted without further requirements than are expressed in her enabling act, with all which, it is asserted in the preamble of the bill, her inhabitants have complied.

The President transmitted to the House to-day a voluminous report by Generals Mower, Quincy, Gregg and Sarah, respecting the New Orleans riot, which condemns the conduct of Mayor Monroe.

The President also sent in documents relative to the compromise suits against Frazier, Trenholm & Co., in the English Courts, showing that Consul Morse acted without authority. Seward, writing to Consul Dudley, January 14th, says that in respect to such funds and property as Morse's authority applied to, he was under express instructions to do nothing which should recognize in any capacity the pretended rebel officials, or abettors of the rebellion who dealt with them, or make any contract which would give validity to such liens or charges.

General Salzer, Minister of Columbia, arrived in Washington, and the misunderstanding, which is said to exist with Burton, will soon be arranged.

The Tribune's special says Seward's letter to the Senate is looked upon by Senators as most insulting and undignified, therefore the Senate will not confirm any new appointments.

Yesterday's vote in the Senate makes it certain that the tariff bill will pass, although the debate may drag two or three days. The vote of 15, to recommit, was composed of 10 Democrats and 5 Republicans; the latter were Brown, Grimes, Henderson, ———, and Sumner.

Sumner yesterday opened with a fierce attack, and was answered by Cresswell, Sherman and Cragin, when Wilson spoke against the bill, and was answered by Conness. The debate lasted until six o'clock. It is doubtful, however, if the bill will pass the House, and manifestly impossible over a veto. Meanwhile the Ways and Means Committee are perfecting their tariff bill.

Senate—Sumner offered resolution requesting the President to communicate the letter upon which Seward founded inquires addressed to Motley. Conness said, let it be adopted. Sumner proceeded with his remarks, and said he had himself received similar letters, when Chairman of Committee on Foreign Relations, written so obscure that he had thrown the letters into the fire. [Morning hour expired.] Sumner wanted the resolution passed. Conness objected, because without Sumner's speech it would have passed, but now he had challenged replies. The resolution was laid over.

The Pacific Mail Steamship Company's steamer Constitution, which left Panama on [illegible] connected with the steamer leaving New York January 1st, arrived this forenoon. By this steamer we have later dates from South America. Dates from Bogota to the 9th of December report the resignation of President Mosquera on the 6th instant. The resignation was handed to the Supreme Court, General Mosquera giving as his reason that his predecessor ruled the country so miserably that he has found it impossible to replenish the empty treasury; that the army is full of abuses, and the treasury has been robbed of $1,000,000 by false certificates; that the Archbishop of Bogota and other Bishops are in rebellion against the Executive; that the circular regarding public order has met with no respect from the Governor of the State, and in fact that there is a general desire to disturb the public peace and to make way with him, the General, by assassination, if necessary. The Supreme Court, he asserts, is aware of all this, and of the abuses on the part of the public press to instigate a rebellion; that the people who think they can save themselves may do so, for all he cares, if they will leave him quietly at home until fear and anarchy break out among them, when they will find him calm and serene, lamenting over the follies of politicians—in fact, such a magistrate as he is should not serve a people so immoral, so debased and revolutionary as the people of Colombia. The Supreme Court had refused to accept the resignation of President Mosquera, so that he must serve against his will.

William F. Fairman, Supervisor from the Third Ward, died at his residence on the corner of California and St. Mary's streets, about midnight last night, of erysipelas, induced by a wound in his right hand, received about two weeks ago. He had partially recovered a few days since, and, contrary to the orders of his physician, went out of doors and attended to business. By this imprudence he took cold, when pleuro-pneumonia set in, accompanied by erysipelas, and terminated fatally. Deceased came to this country in early days, and was foreman of Knickerbocker Engine Company.

He has gone up to Santa Clara to be tried for murder.

Advices from Hardysville, Arizona, January 8th, say Tom Hodge's company of fourteen rangers, near Fort Rock Springs, on the Prescott road, destroyed the camp, killed twenty-two Indians and captured a large lot of horses and mules; but the Indians being reinforced in large numbers, they were compelled to abandon the animals and retreat, with the loss of one man killed, named Hartman, formerly of Aurora, and four wounded.

Investigations into the reported cholera outbreak on the Isthmus of Nicaragua lead to the conclusion that the reports telegraphed here from New York were at least greatly exaggerated as to the number of deaths, and it is even doubted if there was any genuine cholera there. The Board of Health to-day rescinded so much of the order of the Quarantine officer, Doctor Elliott, as would render it impossible for the America to resume her trips at the advertised time, and merely directed the thorough fumigation of the vessel before her coming to the wharf.

It rained nearly all last night and to-day, with a high soutwest wind during the greater portion of the time.

Over eight thousand barrels of flour have already been engaged for shipment by the steamer of January 29th to New York.

IT looks as if affairs at Washington had about reached a climax, and that something decisive would be done forthwith. The speech of Mr. Sumner has intense significance. One of the ablest men and most accomplished orators in the land—a not unworthy successor to the Senatorial mantle of Daniel Webster—and the representative of a State whose voice has had a mighty influence in every crisis through which the country has ever passed, has dared tell the nation, in a speech of wonderful power, that the cause of all our public woes is the Chief Executive himself. No one doubts that Mr. Sumner is sincere; he has devoted his life to a single purpose; he echoes the sentiments of a large part of his constituency, and his speech is little less than a declaration that the Congressional party, of which he is an influential member, will not swerve one iota from its present position. On the other hand, whatever else may be said of the President, it cannot be denied that he has the characteristic of stubbornness in no common degree, without the moral courage required to retract from a false position. Of course, he exerts immense power. A majority of the Supreme Court favor his policy; the army and navy, for the present, at least, are under his control; a powerful party, North and South, indorse him, and the struggle for supremacy is between forces of almost incalculable strength. Beneath these ripples on the surface, is the irresistable might of the popular will, the safeguard of republics, which we rely upon to bring us safely out of our extremities. But the end is not yet; and the present time demands wisdom and moderation in the public councils, to a degree that was never required before. The London Times said, immediately after the surrender of Lee, that the difficulties of the Americans had but just commenced, and it proves so. The Thracians feared the thunderbolt and shot their metallic-headed arrows into the cloud to extract the fluid. Who is the coming man that shall draw the lightning from our political sky?—San Francisco Times.

ANOTHER DEEP MINING SHAFT.—The Hale & Norcross Company have commenced a shaft of the largest dimensions, east of their present works and forty-five feet west of the west line of G street, being in the vicinity of Clark's mill. Through this shaft the mine will be worked to a very great depth, and the location for the shaft and accompanying hoisting works, buildings, etc., is probably the best of any of the mines in this city. The top of the shaft will be 207 feet below the level of top of their old shaft which is sunk on top of the ledge, and it will intersect the ledge at the perpendicular depth of 1,[illegible] feet from the surface at the top of the shaft. The company propose putting up works of the most powerful description, and will prosecute the sinking of the shaft with the greatest energy. The contract for sinking the first 600 feet is already let and the work commenced. We like to write such items as this.—Virginia Enterprise.
